

The Commons at Upper Saddle River offers luxury

The Commons at Upper Saddle River, a rental community in Bergen County, offers all the attributes renters seek in apartment living, whether it's the attention to detail in the modern finishes and appointments or the professional and attentive management.

Consisting of 154 two-bedroom apartments, The Commons at Upper Saddle River boasts residences with interiors ranging from 1,200 to 2,000 square feet and featuring standard amenities such as fully-equipped modern kitchens, two baths, wall-to-wall carpeting, laundry rooms equipped with washers and dryers, private balconies or patios and a number of mechanical and technological features, according to Garden Homes, its owner/manager. First-floor apartments also have access to basements, which provide extra storage space.

Monthly rents start at $1,775.

"The Commons at Upper Saddle River's luxurious lifestyle stems from the oversized, well-appointed units and its exceptional location," said leasing agent Geanne Marie Dombi. "Residents who love the outdoors take full advantage of the community's serene surroundings, which include two ponds and a nature preserve, while those seeking a bit more adventure have easy access to New York City with its many shops, restaurants, exciting nightlife and more."

Residents of The Commons at Upper Saddle River enjoy the community's location. However, it is also close to highways—including routes 17 and 208, I-287 and the Garden State Parkway—providing access to a variety of business, social, recreational and entertainment venues.

Express buses and trains also can be found nearby for convenient access to New York City.
